TWO IRONTON WOMEN ARE INJURED, AUTO DEMOLISHED WHEN HIT BY C. & O. TRAIN

Two women were seriously injured Sunday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding stalled on the Chesapeake and Ohio tracks at Bellefonte crossing, two miles below Ashland, Ky., and was struck by the C. & O. Mayville-Ashland accommodation train, which was traveling at a speed of 40 miles an hour.

They were Mrs. Dennis Elias, 29 years old, and Miss Marjorie Williams, 30 years old, a school teacher, both of Ironton. They were placed aboard the train and brought to the King's Daughters' Hospital in Ashland, where it was stated that both would probably recover. They suffered cuts and bruises, with probable internal injuries.

It was at the Bellefonte crossing that five people were killed and three injured on April 1, last, when an automobile was driven into the side of a speeding passenger train. According to reports of yesterday's accident the automobile, which was owned and driven by Miss Williams, failed to function properly as it was driven on the crossing and before the women could negotiate the grade the train struck the machine, knocking it about 25 feet.

The train was in charge of Conductor J. R. Carr, of Mayville. Miss Williams and Mrs. Elias were traveling toward Ashland, as also was the train. The crossing is unobstructed and a clear view is afforded traffic approaching from either direction on the Ashland-Bellefonte road, according to railroad officials.

Mr. Hermann wired President Herdler and Commissioner Landis of the action taken and stating that the club was willing to take the initiative or co-operate with any action the National League may take.

Reds Going Some

The Reds have won ten out of eleven on their present swing through the East. They won four in New York, losing only one game to the Giants and they copied three in Philly and three in Brooklyn.

Industrial Stars

The Industrial Stars made it three straight from Vanceburg yesterday by defeating the Shamrocks, Lewis county champions, by the score of 10 to 2.

It was a tight struggle for three rounds, during which there was no scoring, but in the fourth the Industrial Stars broke the ice and started the fireworks by doubling over three of the Shamrocks. The Shamrocks, who were led by Fredrick, on the hill for the victors, pitched fine ball, blocking down the best efforts of the Industrial Stars, and he was given good support by his backers, especially by Ralph Keyser, whose work afield was a feature of the combat.

The Stars, now regarded as one of the fastest teams traveling out of Portsmouth, will journey down to the village Sunday to fight the strong village crew in a diamond engagement.

THE YELLOW SEVEN. RUN TO EARTH

BY EDMUND SNELL.

ILLUSTRATED BY R.W. SATERFIELD

©NEA SERVICE INC. 1923.

"I've been searching for your headquarters for the best part of two hours," I said. "I arrived in this forsaken island a matter of five days ago, patted myself on the back at having knocked across a soft billet—and here I am in the wilds of Horeno, with a company of black devils and a fifteen pounder gun that I haven't the remotest idea what to do with. I've instructions from Captain Hewitt—Commissioner of Police at Jesselton—to report to you for duty."

He squirmed through the narrow aperture and, stooping low to avoid bumping his head, unconcernedly disposed six feet three inches of mankind on a length of sacking that covered a neat pile of kerosene tins. "Good man! I was beginning to wonder when you were going to turn up. Where are your men?"

"Standin' very much at ease outside. I split 'em up into platoons and spread 'em out a bit. We'd have been here earlier if I hadn't been for that confounded gun. It got stuck regularly every half hour. Last night we had to hack down a tree to get it out. Forty-seven and a half hours forced marchin', my boy, and every man present!"

Pennington laughed. He tactfully advised Hewitt's good taste in selecting Clay for the job. He sat, for some moments, stroking an unshaven chin, then, removing a portion of the case, extracted a square bottle and a pair of tumbler.

"I've a sort of skeleton force of my own scattered round the base of the hill," he said, measuring out the precious fluid with generous exactitude. "There're tough little chaps who can find their way easily in the jungle. We've installed a telegraph system by means of Dunsinong gongs hung in trees."

"If you're pouring that out for me," broke in the other, "I'll have an inch more soda. No Chai-Hung's up there, is he?"

Pennington nodded.

"We've cornered him at last—and tomorrow's got to see the end of the Yellow Seven."

Clay shifted his long legs into a more comfortable position and tapped a pipe on the heel of his riding boot.

"D'you know," he confessed suddenly, "beyond the fact that Mr. Chai-Hung's not a nice sort of chap to meet, I remain in sublime ignorance of the real reason of all this expended energy. You don't glean much from a sudden phone-call from a harassed official, y'know. What I'm tryin' to get at by all this is: who is Chai-Hung, when he's at home—and what in the name of all that's holy is the Yellow Seven?"

"The Yellow Seven is the name of a secret society the members of which are exclusively of Chinese origin, and whose symbol is a yellow Chinese playing card ornamented with seven black dots. Hewitt called for me when the trouble had grown too big for him to cope with. I formed a little band of native enthusiasts and scoured the country from one end to the other, seeking, sometimes as a result, at others as a tribesman. You see, Clay, the organization was too vast to suppress by sheer force of arms, the island swarmed with Chai-Hung's spies and the only possible method of achieving success was to separate the brigand from the bulk of his followers, hem him in at a spot where the chances of egress were remote and converge upon him from all points at once. Chai-Hung and his immediate bodyguard have been driven from the forest into a small, arid plateau. A few of his disciples still cling to him, but the majority, being false allies, arranged by myself, are concentrating in remote portions of British North Borneo, where Hewitt is on the lookout for them."

A few moments later a native in a greasy velvet jacket and a rusty sword entered and stood at attention before his chief. Clay, observing him curiously, noticed that the man was minus an ear and an eye, that his mouth was slit at either side and that he carried an enormous paring in a wooden sheath bound with bamboo.

"Tobai-Pini, the Tuan Clay has brought with him many soldiers. You will guide them to the points I indicated this afternoon. There is also with them a thing on wheels whose value is very terrible and certain men whose sole object in life is to make it speak. This must go in the square place among the trees and be covered with bushes until the morning."

The scrawny soldier saluted and disappeared.

Pennington smiled.

"It's my famous chief-of-staff. He'd come from the farthest extremity of the earth if he thought I was in trouble."

Clay was polishing the bowl of his pipe on his breeches.

"When do we start making it hot?" Dawn.

"A little after that. There isn't to be the slightest opportunity for Chai-Hung to break through our cordon under cover of darkness. Know what he looks like?"

The other felt for his pocket book. "Hewitt presented me with a photograph. I gather that he's lost his left hand since that was taken. Does he speak English?"

"Perfectly. He has the manners and polish of a diplomat when he chooses."

Clay thrust his head outside and brought it back wearing an expression of disgust.

"Rainin' like the devil," he announced. "Wonder if my orderly's put my tent up yet? It's all the same to you, I'll hop along and see."

He dived into the darkness leaving Pennington to his own reflections.

Three minutes later, Rabat-Pini joined him. He thrust a crumpled paper into the Englishman's hand. "Jesselton—16th," it read. Chai-Hung.

A NATIVE IN A GREASY JACKET and a RUSTY SWORD ENTERED, rounded up successfully in most districts. Sending Dawson. Possibly join you myself—Hewitt."

"Any reply, Tuan?"

Pennington reflected, then scribbled four words on a half sheet of note-paper.

"All going well—Pennington."

He bit the end of his pencil, erased the signature and added:

"Reinforcements arrived. Love to Monica."

"Give this to the runner, Rabat, and arrange for outposts to be stationed half a mile to our rear, prepared to wait in case there are any signs of hostile forces gathering behind us. Tchu."

"Yah, Tuan."

The creature saluted—and was gone. Pennington bent over a rough map. Presently he smiled at his own reflection in a cracked shaving mirror that hung from the tent pole. Possibly join you myself—Hewitt. He had never expected his excellency the Commissioner of Police to resist the temptation of being at the death.

He jerked up his head.

Somebody had blundered into a rope, tripped over it and apparently utilized it to assist him to his feet again, for the tent was as it in the throes of an earthquake. The shock was followed by a somewhat colored dissertation on tents in general and tent-rope in particular.

"Who's that?" demanded Pennington sharply.

The swearing ceased and presently a low chuckle broke upon his ears. "Pennington, or I'm a confounded liar! I'll give you 'three guesses."

"Don't need 'em, old son. In anybody were to ask me who was the fattest, ugliest, clumsiest district officer in the whole of Borneo, I'd promptly reply—

"Not Dawson—of you're really the little gentleman I take you to be. Lord, Pennington, it's a devil of a night!"

The affable Dawson squeezed his great form into the one place that offered cover from the deluge without and lowered himself on to the spot Clay had vacated.

"Not bad—for you," said the man with the Chinese eyes, fighting out a third glass. "Three minutes after the rain, I've just replied to the message announcing your departure."

The red face of the newcomer became suddenly serious.

"The dickens you have! Hewitt dispatched it six hours before I left."

Miss Dolly Wise

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, matrimony, troubles, woe, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Dear Dolly—I read in the paper the other night something about old maids, and was very much interested in your statement that any girl can get a husband if she wants one. That is very true, but there are lots of girls who are old maids because they can't get the kind of a man they want, or would have. This town has some mighty fine girls, who are considered old maids, or who are living a life of single blessedness because they did not meet, or could not have a man their equal, or a man in their own class. Eligible men are few and far between in this town and I can't help but admire the girls who would rather live alone than with an inferior man, or one who was not worthy of them. Some girls will take anything, just so he looks like a man, rather than be called an old maid. Meeting the right sort of man is a small town, is one of the problems of the age, and many girls are so situated that they can't pick up and scout around in other towns and cities in search of a husband. They are too busy earning their bread and butter to do anything like that, and their Prince Charming sometimes gets under a rock or lost in the forest, or captured by some brainless butterfly before he reaches them. Then they are doomed to be an old maid. Just think of it! Dolly, I know mothers in this town who have actually forced their young daughters, yet in their teens to marry men they did not like, and could not love, rather than have them old maids. They seem to imagine that if a man looks at a girl who had better capture him, as that may be the last chance she will ever get. Such mothers should be punished. Now Dolly, I hope the girls who are old maids won't feel badly about it, but will just take a glance at some of their married sisters, and they will feel perfectly satisfied with themselves and their lot. Dolly, when I look at the wives some men have and the husbands of some of the girls I know, I just put myself on the back and say "wise old maid."

So say we all. Old maids are not very happy about their lot, and since they seem perfectly satisfied, I don't think anyone else should bother about them.

Dear Dolly—Do you think they will ever do anything in the high school yard? The front is not so bad, but I think something should be done to the waller street side to keep the dirt from running all over the sidewalk every time it rains. I don't see why some enterprising citizen does not call the attention of the members of the school board to this matter. I think a hedge or a curbing should be put there or the ground sodded, and rolled solid so that the rain would not wash gutters in the yard and let the dirt run onto the sidewalk. And Dolly why didn't they erase the new paint to match the old? I don't think it looks a bit nice the way things have been left like that. And Dolly, while you are at it why not tell the committee in charge of the building of the new Masonic Temple on Gallia street to cut the grass in the lot and also along the street in front of it. We have a lot of dirt dotted up with asphalt in everything and all these weeds make it look like a "high grass town." Come on, now let's get busy and clean things up a bit.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

Olive Roberts Barton

THE TWINS OUT WEST

"Oh, may we go alone?" cried Nancy.

I WANT you to take your magic shoe and go out west," said the Fairy Queen to Nancy and Nick when they had returned from their last adventure. "You don't mind going, do you?"

"No, indeed," said Nancy. "What's it like?" Nick wanted to know.

"Well, I'll tell you, as you haven't got that far in your geography yet," said the Fairy Queen kindly.

"First of all there are great flat places called plains that stretch from sky to sky, or as far as you can see one way to as far as you can see the other way. They haven't any hills, but there are lumpy places here and there with funny names. They aren't high enough to be called hills. They are called buttes. If they are flat on top they are called mesas. Nothing much grows on the plains but sagebrush—a low, gray-looking bush—and in some places grass."

"Well, I shouldn't think any one would want to live there," said Nick. "Oh, but they do," nodded the Fairy Queen. "Lots of people. And they build lovely towns where there is plenty of water, for wherever there is water, things grow in fine style. Besides that they have big farms called ranches where they have cows and horses and sheep. The plains are wonderful, but the place I want you to go is more wonderful still, for it's where the plains run bump into a mountain. There's a beautiful creek with waterfalls where thousands of little speckled fish have a grand time and a lot of cottonwood trees where millions of birds sing, and—"

"Oh, may we go at once?" cried Nancy clapping her hands. "I think I should love it out west."

"I think so, too," smiled the queen. "You'll like it better still when you get there. Take your magic shoes along everywhere you go. And here's a secret! You'll find two ponies tied to a cottonwood tree in a big patch of blue bells at the foot of the mountain."

"Jump on, and they'll take you to a red rock where Mister Gallop a fairy lives in a cave. He needs help. That's why I'm sending you."

States

favorable than it was a year ago when many governors of various political faiths and economic beliefs had to be taken into consultation. In short, the Federal government did not feel that it had the persuasive influence which it now has with the state of Pennsylvania but would the experiment succeed it is hoped other states would be inclined to follow the example of Governor Pinchot.

The formal description of the situation which one obtains at the White House is as follows:

There is one word that will indicate the situation in Pennsylvania and that word is "cooperation," between the Governor of Pennsylvania and the United States authorities. The U. S. Coal Commission will inform Governor Pinchot all the information that he may desire and he will cooperate with the Federal government in undertaking to further negotiations to help in trying to reach a settlement. He has a jurisdiction that is more intimate and complete over the property and the persons that are engaged in the mining of anthracite coal than that which is held by the United States authorities.

The foregoing gives enough of a hint of what is expected by the Federal government of the state executives to show what's coming. The states will exert pressure either by actually getting the mines and making new wage contracts with the men or by threatening to do the same. It was revealed at the White House also that the distribution of coal would be handled by the states after it reached them and that the Federal government through the Interstate Commerce Commission would issue the necessary priority orders so that coal could be expedited over the interstate railroads to the centers of distribution.

Naturally there is an unwillingness at the White House to concede that "Dope" is responsible for a great amount of unhappiness. — Mrs. W. R. knows.

Firm, Plump Flesh!

MANY are the eyes that are turned to gaze with keen admiration on the well developed, healthy girl no matter where she may be—on the rapidly moving thoroughfare or gliding gracefully over the dance floor.

All eyes turn because we all appreciate the girl with the figure so firm and plump—the girl with radiantly red cheeks, cheeks that carry a touch of roses from nature's own garden—the girl with the sparkling eyes, keen and sharp—the girl with buoyancy and the swing of youth.

Not necessarily an out-of-doors girl. Just a girl with ever increasing blood cells. Just a girl filled with the vim and vigor of youth.

S. S. S., since 1826, has stood for increased blood cells. S. S. S. means restored strength—replenished vitality—added energy. Take S. S. S. and watch the bloom of youth return to your cheeks. Watch that flabby, ill nourished flesh fade away before flesh that is firm and plump. Red blood cells will do it and S. S. S. will build them. It contains only pure vegetable ingredients. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is more economical.

Sallie Ann SAYS

So many and varied are the details in the new costumes exhibited for fall at The Fashion that some chart to guide one into the right style ways will prove a never ending pleasure. So for the next few days I will present a chart that will aim not to touch all phases of the mode but rather to be a pocket edition of the outstanding features.

THE STRAIGHT BACK bereft of trimming and often being simply a broad straight panel extending from shoulder to hem is much seen on fashionable wraps. It is a feature that imparts a slim becoming trimness to the wearer.

GLOSSY FABRICS such as satins velvets and satin backed crepes whose surfaces are distinguished by a shiny texture are much preferred this season for frocks. Some of these new fabrics have taken to themselves the richness of elaborate brocades.

TOP COATS are promised a vogue such as they have never known before. Most of them are fur-collared and frequently exhibit very bold vertical or horizontal stripes. Colors though are very soft, leaning to the rich wood brown, tan and occasionally a warm rust shade.

HIGHER CROWNS and a slightly rolled brim are characteristics of fall hats that promise a change from the very tiny cloche that held sway all summer. Other points of interest include feather fancies, swirling veils, and very perky ribbon coques placed jauntily on one side.

More Tuesday.

The River City crew grabbed the first victory, 10 to 5, and annexing the championship by the count of 7 to 5.

The splendid slab work of Hall and Beacher and the timely hitting of Bill Thoroman and Pat Shoemaker, the main factors in the Portsmouth warriors' coping off the two victories, the former shelling out in each contest, with the 'base' closed and the latter came through with eight safe blows out of nine attempts.

The double defeat eliminates the Columbus outfit from further participation in the elimination games to decide the baseball championship of the entire Norfolk and Western system.

Reese testified that Watkins said "there is one man now serving in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus as a result of being 'framed'."

BAKED BREAD IN CAPITOL

Loaves kneaded in the Immense Cellars, While Construction of the Dome Went On.

One usually thinks of the capitol at Washington as a place where the nation's legislative business is transacted, but it is also true that under the majestic and impressive dome of that structure bakers once piled their trade.

The story of this dome is related by Gilbert Grosvenor in the new edition of a commission to the National Geographic society, entitled "The Capitol, Wonder Building of the World," as follows:

"During the darkest hours of the Civil war, while the capitol basement did service as a military bakery, Lincoln insisted that there be no suspension of the building of its dome."

"District volunteers, enrolled to defend their homes and the capitol, heard reports of plots to burn the flour mills in Georgetown and instantly pressed into service every vehicle to be found on the streets or in stables, loaded them with flour and all day there proceeded along Pennsylvania avenue the most curious procession which ever traversed that street of countless wagons. The flour was stored safely in the capitol's vast cellars and Washington's home-baking habits were revolutionized. Tradition has it that French and Vienna loaves gained their American vogue from the United States capitol bakers."

"While bakers kneaded war loaves below, hammerers were busy every working day on the giant dome above."

GOT HIM INTO PICTURE

More or Less Happy Bridegroom Not Absolutely Left Out of the Wedding Notice.

Jenkins was substituting for a day or two during the temporary absence of the regular society editor. He is a detail man, quick to notice omissions and call attention to them. So when Miss Daisy Blank came in with a long story about the wedding of her dearest Sam, Jenkins took his pipe out of his mouth and studied the delicate missive. He grunted at the adjectives about the bride's costume, frowned over the elaborate decorations and the lengthy description of the music and the singing and then said to Miss Daisy:

"Who was the unhappy man?"

"You mean the groom?"

"Yes. There has to be a groom at a thing of this sort, doesn't there?"

"To be sure," and Miss Daisy blushed a bit. "It was Mr. William Smith. Didn't I have him in?"

"Not that I can see."

"Well, put him in somewhere, please. Of course he was present also."

So Jenkins wrote at the bottom of Miss Daisy's exquisite little sketch: "Bill Smith was also present."—Harper's Magazine.

Roamers Beaten

sembled in the city to counsel with the union officials. Scale committee members said they had been notified by the official group to be on hand. The significance of their presence lay in the fact that the scale committee when fully assembled, has power to recall the work suspension notice, which were issued Saturday at Atlantic City after dealings with the union chiefs and the operators' representatives had been broken off.

The governor's address follows in part: "As the representative of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania I have called you together for the purpose of finding a way to keep the anthracite mines in operation. I delayed asking you to meet here after the negotiations at Atlantic City had failed, until I was assured that to do so would not run counter to the wishes of the Federal authorities. I am acting now solely in my capacity as governor of Pennsylvania and with the rights and interests of the people of this state and of the other anthracite using states clearly in mind. "The controversy between the miners and operators of the hard coal fields is not a private quarrel. "The general public is a party to this dispute and its rights as well as the rights of the two other parties, must be represented and recognized. A shortage of anthracite means not only a huge loss of profits to the operators—not only a huge loss of wages to the miners—but it means also loss of health among millions of Americans families, loss of comfort, of working power and of time. "The interest of the public in the settlement of this dispute is double. In the first place the public wants it settled. It is utterly wrong that the people should be called upon again to bear the enormous and most oppressive burden of a shortage of anthracite coal.

"In the second place, the public wants it settled on terms of even handed justice. The right of the public to interfere carries with it the clear responsibility to see that impartial justice is done to both sides.

"In its desire to be served the public cannot afford to accept any settlement that is based upon anything else but justice. Furthermore, an unjust settlement cannot last. The people believe and are right in believing, that the sufferings which come from one coal shortage after another, are intolerable. "The country is just now emerging upon a period of prosperity after a prolonged depression. The closing down of the anthracite mines would tend to undermine the confidence essential to a continuance of this prosperity.

"The public has not forgotten, and I shall not forget, the rights and interests of the miners and operators. Each side represents a great and vital service to the public. Moreover, each side stands in the presence of a great and vitally important duty to the people at large.

Dispute Must Be Settled
The public interest demands that this dispute shall be settled and that a suspension of mining shall be avoided. The thing is possible—and it must be done. "I recognize the right of the mine workers to organize for their own protection and to fair and decent conditions of living. I am fully aware that the strike is a right which cannot be abrogated or denied. The exercise of this right, however, should be made unnecessary by the use of orderly and reasonable methods of adjustment. I recognize the right of the mine operators to a just return on their investment and their managerial ability.

"We are at the threshold of winter. I call your attention again to our duty to the public, yours as miners and operators, mine as executive of the only anthracite producing state. "The eleventh hour is upon us and the crisis has now been reached. We must do in this eleventh hour what should have been done before. It can be done and must be done. There is still time. Let us use this time effectively in a spirit of common counsel so that this common danger may pass, with due regard to the rights of all and with due credit and honor to all concerned."

To Replace Guard Rail

A dangerous place on the Scitot Trail five miles above Portsmouth, resulting from a broken and defective guard rail system, is to be eliminated by the state highway department. It is understood. The Chamber of Commerce has the following to say about the proposed correction in a letter to a state official: "To have for attention and reply your letter of the 22nd instant in which you refer to broken guard rail on I-C-H-3 north of this city to which we referred in our communication of the 21st to the Department at Columbus, is appreciated. "We are very pleased to note that you could make repairs so quickly. I myself have noticed that attention has been given to it and want to thank you for the very prompt service rendered. "The fact that you have marked this point as especially dangerous and that you have in process the installation of a concrete balustrade there will be fully appreciated by the public here. The placement of such improvement over this particular place will without doubt be the agency whereby life will be saved. "Merely want to be of assistance in matters of service and safety, the Chamber appreciates every instance in which attention is given to that which is referred to. We therefore, thank you for your courtesy and favors for this section of the state."

Rarden Wins From Champs

The Rarden Champs played rings around and romped all over Harry Mceneach's reputed champions from North Moreland on the Rarden diamond yesterday afternoon. The home boys enjoying a frolic at the expense of the invaders who were blanketed while the Brush Croppers piled up a big score, the combat ending 12 to 0.

"Babe" Thompson, Rarden's crack young sharpshooter, stood the visitors on their heads over the entire route, allowing but six scattered hits and striking out along with his pals. Adams, the pitcher, earned the win, gathering 16 safe blows, and driving Shorer off the hill under a withering shell-fire in the fifth. Adams and Eblin, who succeeded him, faced no better. Shorer, Lanthorn and "Wib" Gardner, the latter a recruit, starred at bat, the latter leading the attack with four hits, including a double, the trio collecting a total of ten hits, half of which were two-ply shots.

LAYING DOWN THE LAW

In a case brought before him that we believe involved a charge of interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duties, Municipal Judge Stanley McCall discharged the defendants because they had been illegally brought before the court. In doing so he gave the advice that a policeman had not the right to arrest a person for misdemeanor, unless he had a warrant or seen him in the actual commission of the offense.

It would be well for all judges to lay this injunction upon all their executive officers frequently. They might go farther and say even though he carry a warrant no officer has a right to kill a citizen charged with misdemeanor, because he flees. He can use all the force necessary to capture alive, but not to slay. Conversely to that a citizen has full right to kill an officer who attempts to arrest him for misdemeanor, when he has no warrant, for the law regards liberty as a most sacred and inviolable right, a right that can not be invaded without due process of law.

Unfortunately, officers have come to ignore, or to be utterly ignorant of these primary principles of law and liberty. They need to be instructed and impressed with them, else some day, some where, a deplorable tragedy is going to result. And think of it, isn't the law most wise and beneficent in requiring issuance of warrant before arrest for certain offenses can be made? Liberty is dear to us all, character is a thing to be sacredly acquired and held to, yet, if it be that an officer can take into custody, of his own fancy, any person whomsoever he please upon the most trivial accusation, then is every one's liberty menaced and every one's reputation periled, and himself subject to humiliation and disgrace while malice, envy and injustice hold carnival.

LACKING INFORMATION

THE Chicago News says it is reassuring when President Coolidge announces he will adhere to the Harding policies, because he is a man of few words and one who sticks fast to them.

When the News says Coolidge sticks fast, it is to be wondered if any comparison lay back in his mind. Anywise both it and Coolidge would be far more illuminating and, perhaps, more reassuring, if they told us what the Harding policies are or were.

Harding was an amiable and engaging character, but definiteness and decisiveness were by no means marked characteristics of his. Three times from March to August he changed views on the world court of international justice, all this year from the inner circle about him it was whispered that he had undergone radical change of opinion on the league of nations.

Does the News mean Coolidge is going to follow the same shifting course? If so we fail to see where it gets its reassurance.

It is pretty apparent that Mr. Coolidge hasn't so far discharged the old Harding literary bureau and it is working over time to hold its job.

Those fellows from West Virginia and Kentucky, who make heroic efforts to consume all the moon made in their own states, are not envied if it suits them, but it doesn't suit us a bit to have them carry it down here and run over us with it in their stomachs. We pay for our roads and like them to be no more unsafe than our own recklessness makes them.

Ooray and Hooray! Yup! The King is dead, long live the King. Senator Reed Smoot says Coolidge will undoubtedly be elected president.

New York Tribune says "Coolidge moves quietly into White House." Wonder if it expected him to hire a band.

Seems to make all the difference against whom you are fighting. The gallant Spanish garrison at Tiptun, Morocco, beleaguered by Moors, says it will die to a man before surrendering. By contrast it recalls a certain battle in Porto Rico, where one American commander received great acclaim for a grand victory he won, the only casualty of which was the killing of a miserable jackass.

The way you put it does make a vast difference. The wire says a New Jersey parson married 9,000 couples. The newspaper headline hawls he tied up 18,000 persons.

Always got to even up. Post office elated on shortening mail service from New York to California four days by using aeroplanes. We wrote several letters to New York week before last and they haven't reached there yet. Leastwise those to whom they were addressed say they have not received them.

New York-Day-By-Day

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, August 27.—A page from the diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Early with my wife to the station and by train to Polhem Manor to spend the day with Roy and Peggy Howard and a glorious sunshiny day, too.

Peggy to meet us and so to their brave new home, like an Italian castle, and I was struck with the folly of living in a crowded city. Those who do it are missing the best in life and a pox on those who deny it.

After dinner of chicken and cream gravy, my wife played the harpsichord and I laid on the floor and frolicked for an hour with Ching, the dog, and Tom Puss, the cat, then showed Jane and Jack some tricks of magic, very neat.

Over the countryside in the late evening, stopping in a field to pluck some black-eyed Susans. Back again for a cold snack and sat about talking of this and that, thence home in a gasoline buggy, and so to bed.

In contrast to the peaceful life of the suburbs one is struck by the news of a Saturday night incident in New York. A Bronx woman strayed from the family hearth and consumed too much liquor at a party. She was placed in a cell and on Sunday morning, overcome by remorse, attempted to hang herself. She gave a fictitious name and when the news appeared in the Monday morning papers more than 50 husbands called up the police station for a more detailed description. Times have changed. It was the wife who used to worry about her husband on Saturday night.

He sat in a subway train dressed in solemn black and with his black rimmed glasses resembled a hooded owl. He was the type the Victorian novelist would love to characterize. I am always wondering what people do and who they are when I sit opposite them in subways or street cars. My dredging in the depths of human nature are generally faulty. I guess wrong. This man I judged to be a morgue keeper or an undertaker's assistant. An acquaintance got on at 14th street and spoke to him. The man himself alighted at Grand Central. I asked my acquaintance who the elusive person might be. I was told he manufactured toy balloons for children.

Another one of my inchoate musings came a cropper in Forty-Fifth street. Some red-shirted laborers were digging a ditch. The usual group of curious gathered about. An old hurdy-gurdy started grinding out ancient tunes somewhat off key. I thought the tired workers would slow up a minute to listen. It might be a pleasant few moments of diversion.

At a debate at Apple Grove school last night it was resolved that the automobile does not hurt its' railroads any more than the railroads hurt its' automobiles. "I never expect to see a purlier sight than the sun when it first appeared this morning," said Mrs. Lib. Pash, who always waits up for her daughters.

tion. Instead they shouted for the hurdy-gurdy to move away. They would rather work.

The Broadway gold-diggers now sing a song called "Let's Go Buy!" And they generally carry out the sentiment of the refrain—from shoes to diamonds or what-have-you.

And here is what a New York morning paper reports finding in the Morrisville Heights apartment of a chorus girl who drank carbolic acid after a merry whirl along the gilded path: "Six cigarette stubs, 41 cents, two empty gin bottles, a bottle of henna, a small packet of cocaine, and a letter from her mother imploring her to come back to her home in the middle west."

Psychology

Robert is only eight years old but he has some ideas of his own and he dislikes compliments about his flaxen hair. At school he overheard some of the teachers say that anything could be accomplished with a knowledge of "self-applied psychology." On returning home he said:
"Mamma, where can I get a book that tells about self applied psychology?"
"Why, Robert, what do you wish to do?" she asked.
"I want to see if it will turn my hair black," was the answer.

Best Clingers

Mrs. Shortley was discussing the latest fashions with a young lady caller.
"Did you say your father was fond of those clinging gowns, May?"
"Yes, he likes one to cling to me for about three years,"—Sheffield (Eng.) Telegraph.

An Up-to-Date Young Fellow

Two high-school girls, short-skirted, bob-haired, bright-eyed, and talkative, sat in a downtown motion picture theatre while on the screen before them a story of love was unfolded. The central figure was a man whose chief distinction, outside his motion picture success, is that of a certain brand of trousers which once were named for him.
One girl sighed. She turned to her companion and whispered:
"Oh, Nell, wouldn't you just love to have a man like that?"—Indianapolis News.

Willie's Appetite

Willie ate a large green apple, ate it skin and core.
Then he ate another one, afterwards two more.
Naturally you imagine Willie writhed in pain to the dust bin.
Nothing to it. He's all ready the same to do again.—Tennison J. Daff.

"Do It Now."

The head of the firm was a hustler, and it annoyed him to see clerks idling. One day, in an attempt to awaken his staff, he bought six signs bearing the motto, "DO IT NOW!" He hung these up in various parts of the office and waited results. The following Saturday the hustler, sad of face gloomily detached each of the signs from the wall, and bore them despondently to the dust bin.
During the week the cashier had gone off with $10,000, the chief bookkeeper had eloped with the typist, three junior clerks had asked for a raise in salary, and the office boy started to Oklahoma to become a bandit.—Progressive Grocer.

SPAUN SHOW TO STAY ANOTHER WEEK

The Spain Family Show holding forth near the waiting station at Millbrook Park is drawing big crowds nightly and Manager Spaun stated last evening that the show will hold over all this week.

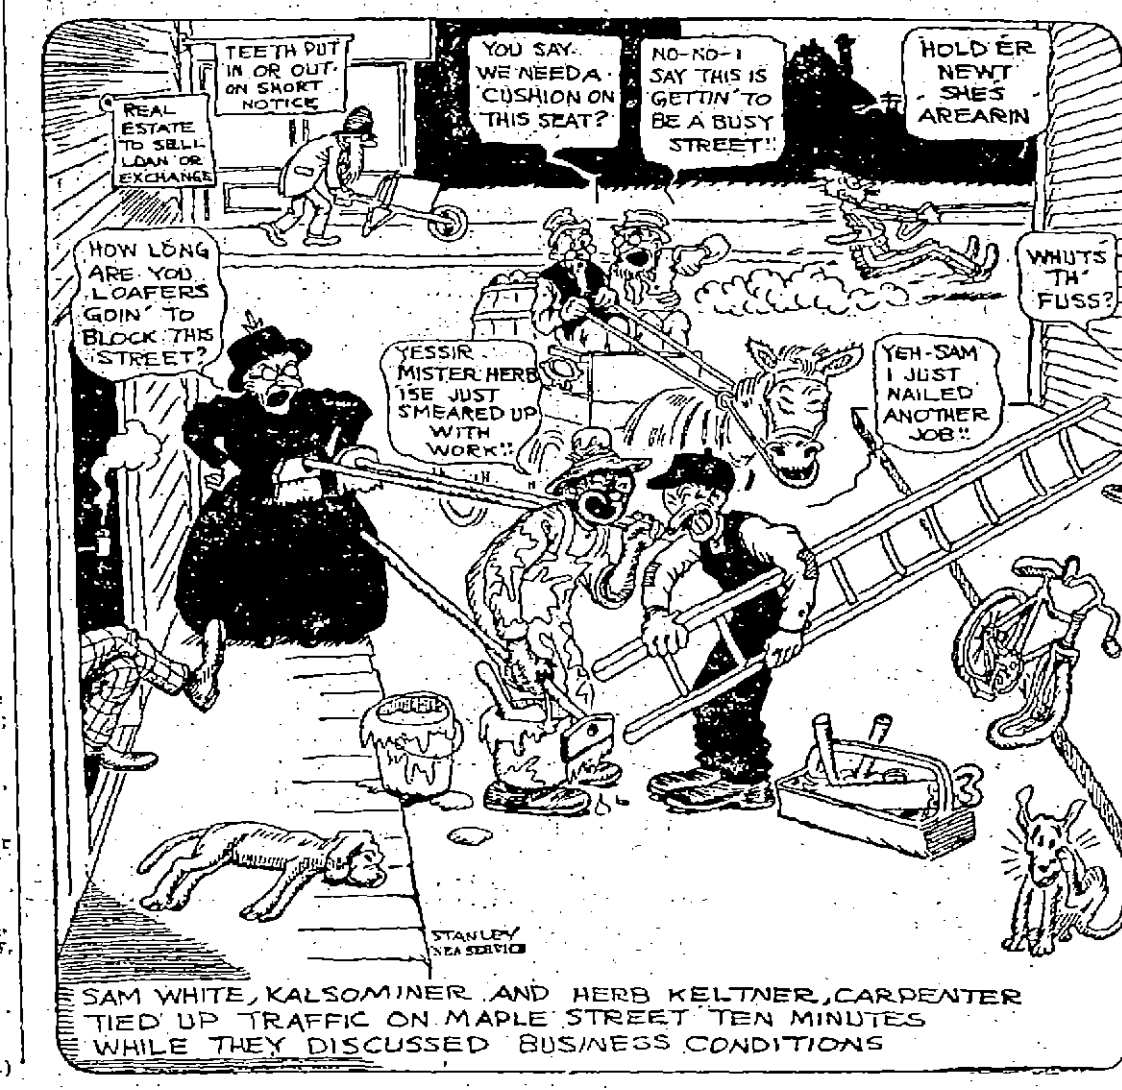

The company consists of twenty people and the two hour program consists of high class vaudeville in which Mascot, the educated parrot, formerly on Keith time, features. This equine does practically everything but talk and makes a hit with big and little, young and old alike.

Mr. Spaun himself is chief comedian and as he got his early experience with the famous P. T. Barnum of other days, every one attending can go prepared to do a lot of laughing. He pulls some original stuff that is a scream.

The program which is changed nightly consists of seven vaudeville acts and a high class film. For an evening of clean amusement one can go far and pay more and get a lot less entertainment.
